A detailed study was performed from high altitude and low level aerial photography in order to confirm or deny the reported damage inflicted by U.S. strike aircraft on a Polish hospital located in the city of Vinh, North Vietnam.

Although numerous bomb craters are noted in the Vinh complex, there is no evidence of any damage to the Polish hospital. Foundations of 6 support buildings in the general vicinity of the hospital are noted on the latest photography. However, comparison of pre-strike photography reveals that these buildings were dismantled sometime prior to [REDACTED]
